The upside was full of gangs. flashing weapons. These little wars, engaging in fighting and using weapons sowed the seeds of negativity in the hearts of people who changed their love of fear. This was the time that gave his haters light coming forward and the people who were once his followers have now developed his terrifying image in their minds. The violence spread, and the city of Ludhiana, which used to be famous for him and his work, came under him. After 12 years, on the fifth day of September 2003, the hero was unexpectedly abducted from the road by a samral and was brutally murdered in the village of soloudi. The family had no idea about him and police somehow managed to find his body after numerous searches. His body was hanged from a tree and an autopsy found he had been shot twice after breaking his arms and knees. The police decided not to open up to many people about his funeral, and therefore included only family members for secret cremation only to avoid loss and other related problems. According to the report, 11 people were found guilty of his murder and sent to Patiala prison in 2007. The main involvement in the murder was Lakh, who was shot dead by Gandhi's brother Maninder. He helped people get married to their daughters and sisters. He gave his full medical treatment to sufferers who are not financially strong. His good personality was limited to his own village, and the negativity that was developed among outsiders called him a gangster who has a name in FIRs, criminal cases, illegal labor and attempted murder. His villagers still respect him as a role model, holding various cricket and football tournaments every year in memory of him. The youth of the university began a union on its behalf 'Gandhi Student Union Group'.
